

Lots of Business to Be Done in Libya, but Doing It Isn't Easy

Ranks of Peugeot utility trucks are parked along the waterfront in Tripoli, waiting for Government distributors to turn them over to eager customers.

By MARVINE ROWE
Special to The New York Times
TRIPOLI, Libya—This is ridiculous, a very important American executive complained the other day to anyone who would listen in the crowded lounge of the Libya Palace Hotel. "I've written 10 letters to the minister and received no answer." It was the Talk, perfectly normal, foreign residents commented with little sympathy. Official letters rarely get answered because there are so few secretaries. When the Libyans expelled the Italian colonists in 1970, most of the secretaries in the administration left and have not been replaced by Libyan women, who, for the most part, are still wearing veils. The situation has led to minor crises. At one time there were rumors that the country was going bankrupt because bills of large contractors were not being paid, but it was simply the lack of secretaries. Another sign: American oil companies' books went away because the Government had failed to cash a $12 million check for the same reason.

Doing business in Libya is not easy. The vice president of another American oil concern made several futile trips here from the United States before he finally got to see the minister last spring.

A Swedish company was completing a vital contract when the Libyan negotiating committee disappeared for several weeks without warning. A Greek industrialist who arrived a few days ago was given appointments at midnight because it was Ramadan, the month of fasting when observant Muslims do no work during the day.

More general complaints voiced by foreign businessmen include these: There are no reliable statistics and no market data; Libyans often disregard contracts; they are frequently late for appointments; hours are sometimes days; when a Libyan director gives his subordinates orders they are commonly disregarded; there is a host of bureaucratic rules.

Yet more and more foreigners are coming here because of the attractive market. The Government expects to receive something like $5 billion in oil revenues this year and plans to spend a good deal of it on development projects and, although it is not acknowledged officially, on armaments. The rush of foreigners in the Libya Palace and other hotels includes international bankers, representatives of aircraft companies from German and British concerns and Americans.

The foreigners also complain about the austere, puritanical style but things are better than they were. In the early days of liberation led by Col. Muammar seven years ago, nightclubs were closed, all alcohol, and wine was prohibited, including short sleeves and girls and long hair for boys street and display signs in Arabic only.

The laws still hold, but more relaxed. There is a black market in whisky, and many still in their backyards dinavian do-it-yourself wine popular.

Libyans no longer stare when women appear in backless frocks. Libyan schoolgirls and boys wear their hair slacks as tight as anyone else. Street signs are still Arab. Terprising shops have added for the literate foreigners—cars, shoes, clothes, all in a. And in the museum the tape off the English lettering. "We Libyans were stricter than other Moslems, because we became independent weing else," a young builder, shazi explained. "We were had no schooling, only the I so the revolution had to c religion."

With the passage of time, tionaries have more money, fers, more experience and confidence. Great zeal has placed by a more pragmatic. The Libyans are even showi charitable attitude toward it colonizers.

In 1970 the remaining 25 families were peremptorily and the Libyans took over. Catholic cathedral and convent an Islamic school. Now the Catholic churches in Tripoli in Benghazi and officials be- cillant relations with the Val. Important, perhaps, in excess Italian businessmen have p. and Italy is Libya's principl partner.

One-Day Protest Strike in Madrid Is Partial Success

By JAMES M. MARKHAM
Special to The New York Times
MADRID, Oct. 1—A leftist call for a "day of struggle" in Madrid evoked a spotty response today. Thousands of workers staged job actions or strikes, but life in most of the capital went on normally.

Though limited, the day of protest added to the travails of the 3-month-old Government of Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez Gonzalez, who has been guiding Spain toward new democratic institutions as the national economy founders.

The one-day labor action, which was punctuated by scattered street demonstrations, was called by a loose coalition of Socialist, Communist and left-of-center organizations, nominally to protest the slaying Monday of a 21-year-old psychology student in downtown Madrid.

The murder occurred at the end of a tiny demonstration for political amnesty, and opposition groups have charged it was the work of a right-wing vigilante group called the Guerrillas of Christ the King.

But the themes of today's melange of work stoppages, slowdowns, picketing and street protests—on occasion dispersed by riot police—were broadened to include demands for full democratic liberties and the legalization of the country's embryonic non-government labor unions.

Some members of the left-of-center alliance called "Democratic Coordination" clearly hoped to capitalize on the momentum generated by a general strike that closed down the northern Basque country on Monday. But the spirit of cultural solidarity that rallied a half million Basques is conspicuously absent in this bulging metropolis of almost four million.

Even the Communist-dominated Workers Commissions and the Socialist General Union of Workers seemed lukewarm about today's action. Only far-left enthusiasts seemed willing to term the action a general strike.

Size of Protest Hard to Gauge
One labor informant said that political guidance for the hastily called "day of struggle" had been somewhat confusing—with the ultimate decision usually being taken by local leaders in a belt of factories on the outskirts of Madrid. As a result, the militant and fairly well-organized workers from mental-working construction and printing plants in the industrial belt were in the forefront of the protest.

The variety of job actions—frequently little more than political pep talks during extended coffee breaks—made it difficult to know what percentage of greater Madrid's million-strong labor force took part.

A government court put the number of strikers at 25,000, a spokesman for the Workers Commissions claimed 200,000. "Maybe they got 70,000 or 80,000," said one well-placed informant who kept his own count. "But as a general strike, it was a failure."

Pickets disrupted some bus and subway lines, and about 200 buses were stranded at a terminal depot. Some commuters had difficulty getting to work and there was a noticeable thinning of traffic in the capital's usually congested main avenues. But banks, department stores, small shops and taxis functioned as usual.

Meanwhile, King Juan Carlos removed from active service two right-wing generals who had opposed the program of gradual political liberalization of Prime Minister Suarez. Last week, one of the two, Gen. Fernandez de Santiago, lost his position as First Deputy Prime Minister to a relatively liberal general favored by the King. The other general removed today was Lt. Gen. Carlos Iniesta Cano, a former commander of the powerful Civil Guard.

Record Total Leaving Congress Voluntarily

48 Have Chosen to Drop Out of the House and Eight From the Senate

By RICHARD L. MADDEN
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30—For Senator Hiram L. Fong, the major problem was trying to cope with jet lag. For Representative W.S. (Bill) Stuckey Jr., the place had become "more dog-eat-dog than it used to be" and lacked organization. For Representative Thomas M. Rees, it was a realization that he had spent too many years waiting on the sidelines saying, "Hey coach, send me in."

Representatives Thomas M. Rees, left, and W. S. Stuckey Jr. reminisce about their life in Washington. "I just felt I kind of met a blank wall," said Mr. Rees. "There's no organization to it," says Mr. Stuckey, describing Congress.

For these and a lot of other reasons, a record number of representatives and senators are retiring, mostly voluntarily, from Congress this year. As Congress prepares to adjourn tomorrow, 48 members of the House have already announced plans to retire or have sought other office. Three others have been defeated for re-election and there will be more casualties in the November election. Eight of the 33 senators whose terms are expiring are leaving voluntarily.

Most Say They Enjoyed the Job but Encountered Too Much Frustration

By RICHARD L. MADDEN
Special to The New York Times

Mr. Hébert was deposed nearly two years ago as chairman of the House Armed Services Committee but he said he was not bitter. "It's been a fun game," he said.

Mr. Rees said that he had entered the House as a "rather anti-establishment" representative and had done extensive work on such intricate matters as energy and international finance. Yet, for most of his years in the House, he added, he felt frustrated in getting his suggestions accepted or listened to by his colleagues. "I just felt I kind of met a blank wall," he said.

First Swine Flu Shots Are Given In Massachusetts and Indianapolis

By HAROLD M. SCHNECK JR.
Special to The New York Times

WALTHAM, Mass., Oct. 1—About 80 elderly residents of a nursing home here, many of whom remember the great world flu epidemic of 1918, were today among the first in the nation to be vaccinated against a possible outbreak of swine flu in the United States this winter.

The first flu shots were given here by the State Public Health Commissioner, Dr. Jonathan Fielding, whose view of the national flu vaccine program is substantially different from that of the Federal Government.

Today, while he urged vaccination as soon as possible for persons over 65 years of age and those with chronic diseases of heart, lungs and kidneys, he pointedly made no recommendation either for or against swine flu shots for the general public. He said the vaccine will be available for those who want it, but that it will be up to the individual to decide whether or not to take it.

Residents of a nursing home at Waltham, Mass., receive their vaccinations.

been neglected since the strike started Monday night.

Meanwhile, in Columbus, the state capital, some 1,500 municipal employees went on strike at midnight last night. Although police and firefighters are not involved in the strike there, called by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, garbage workers and those who provide other essential services are out and their services have been halted.

Columbus, situated in the center of the state, has a population of about 570,000 and employs about 4,500 workers. It is the first time that city has had a full-scale strike by municipal employees.

Back to Normal on Monday

Here, where police cruisers began rolling out of the small police headquarters in the center of town shortly before noon, Mayor Hunter said full police and fire services should be quickly restored, with all services back to normal by Monday. Garbage, which had been piling up at a rate of 100 tons a day, was beginning to accumulate but he said it should all be picked up by early next week.

Dennis Haines, a 39-year-old lawyer who is the chief negotiator for the safety forces, as the police and fire unions call themselves, said the new work agreement would increase the average base pay for firefighters and patrolmen to $12,900 a year from $11,400. Still to be worked out are a number of noneconomic issues including a no-reprisal demand for employees involved in the strike.

When the police and fire unions went on strike Monday, six other unions, with which the city must also negotiate new work agreements, said that they would respect picket lines and not report to work. That support was fairly successful among the other unions.

Mayor Hunter said he was "absolutely optimistic" that agreements could be reached with the unions without a job action similar to the one staged by the firemen and policemen.

12 Percent Offer Rejected

Yesterday afternoon the two unions overwhelmingly rejected an offer by the city for a 12 percent raise equally divided over the two-year pay period. The unions wanted an 8 percent pay increase during the second year. But the city said it had made its final offer.

What apparently shifted the atmosphere here was approval in Washington late yesterday by Congress and President Ford of an extension of the revenue-sharing act and the public works bills.

Mr. Hunter, a Republican running for Congress, announced later that he had been notified by the White House that the bills had been approved and that the city would get $988,000 in funds it had been seeking. That was money that the city had been using as "maybe money" in its negotiations this week. But with that definite, the city apparently felt comfortable making another offer, which it did about midnight.

Reached at his home in Tallahassee, Mr. Carswell said he was "imagine he'll be in care for some time."

Mr. Carswell, who was a vocal opponent of homosexual rights, was named to the Florida Supreme Court in 1970. He was one of the most conservative members of the court.

Humphrey to Undergo Surgery; Still Seeks Majority Leadership

By CHRISTOPHER LYDON
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Senator Hubert H. Humphrey has told a handful of Senate colleagues that he has cancer and expects to lose his bladder in major surgery next week.

As the 65-year-old Minnesota Democrat tells it, the good news is that his doctors believe radical surgery can dispose cleanly of a cancer threat that has shadowed him for eight years. After a month or so out of action, Mr. Humphrey notes, he will still have two months left to campaign for the majority leadership job and post in the 95th Congress.

His closest friends and supporters, however, see Mr. Humphrey well behind Senator Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia in the race to lead the Senate Democrats, and his surgery takes him out of the running at a moment when he had meant to be putting on steam.

A week ago, before Mr. Humphrey's surgery had been prescribed, Senator Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts chided him privately for a lackadaisical drive for the majority leadership job and warned that time was running out. Senator Byrd, now the Democratic whip, is widely believed to be "within a few votes," as one colleague put it today, of succeeding Senator Mike Mansfield of Montana, the longest-serving majority leader the Senate ever had.

"I've thought about that many times," Mr. Humphrey puzzled out loud, "it always lingered in the back of my mind, some concern that this might break out."

Mr. Humphrey testifies on the brink of a Presidential declaration at the end of April, at a time when many Democrats thought he still had a good chance of winning the nomination. He had just had one of his regular six-month checkups on the borderline tumor in his bladder, which doctors told him then looked less threatening than ever. He decided, nonetheless, not to challenge Jimmy Carter in the New Jersey primary, the last one Mr. Humphrey could enter. And though Mr. Carter lost the New Jersey primary anyway, Mr. Humphrey's chances at the nomination never recovered.

"Looking back to the decision I made, I have no regrets," Mr. Humphrey said. "Especially now—imagine what the situation would have been now. It would have been nothing short of a disaster for the party. My personal condition demands attention without delay. You'd literally have had to step aside. It would have been a very difficult decision."

Liberals See Possible Gain

But one school of thought among Senate liberals argues that Senator Humphrey's absence this month will improve his chances by letting Senator Kennedy and Senator Dick Clark of Iowa take over the button-holing that Mr. Humphrey seemed hesitant to do for himself.

By no means all the liberal Democrats in the Senate are supporting Mr. Humphrey. Senators Floyd K. Haskell of Colorado, William Proxmire of Wisconsin and Abraham A. Ribicoff of Connecticut are all thought by their fellow Senators to have committed their votes to Senator Byrd. Senators Frank Church of Idaho and Adlai E. Stevenson 3d of Illinois are viewed as leaning toward Mr. Byrd, and as probable entries on what Senator Byrd claims is a list of 36 Senators he can count on next January.

Mr. Humphrey's own list of supporters includes some of the Senate's best-known names, including Senators Edmund S. Muskie of Maine and George McGovern of South Dakota. It also includes freshmen like Senators Gary W. Hart of Colorado and Joseph R. Biden Jr. of Delaware.

Mr. Humphrey is thought to have an advantage among Democratic candidates running for their first election to the Senate this year. Even after Mr. Humphrey was told of his cancer late last week, he kept his campaign dates for two of those candidates, appearing last Sunday for Edward Zorinsky in Omaha and last Tuesday night for Representative Paul Sarbanes in Baltimore.

When he spoke of his surgery in an interview last evening, one of the first things Mr. Humphrey mentioned was that "it hinders me the joy of going around campaigning—especially for myself. Running for his fifth term, Mr. Humphrey has only a nominal Republican opponent in Gerald Brekke, a college teacher, but the Senator had not missed a single weekend of campaigning in Minnesota since February, and he had plans for four more weeks of concentrated travel in the state this month.

Whether a premonition of his medical problems affected his decision not to run for President this year is something that even Mr. Humphrey cannot be sure of.

Surgery for Cancer of Bladder Is Done More Freque

By LAWRENCE K. ALTMAN

The operation that Senator Hubert H. Humphrey is expected to undergo next week at the Bethesda Naval Medical Center is being done with increasing frequency by American urologists at other medical centers to deal with bladder cancers.

The type of operation depends on the circumstances in each case and cannot be determined fully until the patient is on the operating table. But the surgery can involve removing the bladder and taking a small piece of bowel to create a new urinary drain that opens through the abdomen just to the side of the navel, where it empties into a bag.

This is a type of operation that a team of surgeons, including nationally prominent urologists, is expected to do on Mr. Humphrey, according to a member of the team caring for the Minnesota Democrat.

Spokesmen for the American Cancer Society, the American Medical Association, the American College of Surgeons, the American Hospital Association, and the National Center for Health Statistics said they did not have any figures on the frequency of surgery for bladder cancer.

Mr. Humphrey's surgery has been made necessary by the growth of a small bladder tumor that, when examined under a microscope after a biopsy, showed that cancerous cells had invaded the muscle layer of the bladder, the medical source said.

Noncancerous Tumors Removed

The doctor, who asked not to be identified, said that because Mr. Humphrey has suffered from recurrent benign, or noncancerous, tumors in different areas of the bladder over the last eight or nine years, the Senator has undergone cystoscopic examinations every six months at the Bethesda Naval Medical Center. These tumors were removed by simple surgical procedures.

However, a new therapeutic approach was used three years ago. At that time, a tumor was detected that a number of pathologists, including experts at the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology in Washington, could not conclusively determine to be cancerous or benign, the medical source said.

Accordingly, the doctors decided to treat Mr. Humphrey as if the tumor was malignant. Mr. Humphrey underwent a series of x-ray treatments five minutes each weekly for six weeks. He suffered unusually severe reactions to the radiation treatment and after the therapy, Mr. Humphrey told a New York Times reporter that it was "the most terrible experience of my life."

As an extra precaution, Senator Humphrey also took a drug called thiotepa.

When a cystoscopy was done at Bethesda last April, Mr. Humphrey's bladder "was the clearest it ever has been," the medical source said.

On the most recent cystoscopic examination, urologists found "a little indurated area next to the opening of the left ureter [the tube that carries urine from the bladder]," the doctor said.

Pathologists, the doctor said, found the tumor to be grade one or two, that is, of low malignancy, but the tumor "has become invasive, penetrating to the muscle layer. This is what bothered everybody. But we think we caught it very early."

Mr. Humphrey still must undergo a series of routine diagnostic tests such as x-rays of his stomach and intestines before the surgery, to make sure that there is no evidence of spread beyond the bladder and that no other unrelated medical problem is apparent.

The extensive surgery is planned "to be on the safe side," the doctor said. "We're fairly optimistic because six months ago his bladder was clear and the tumor is low-grade and couldn't have gone that far in the interval."

The operation is expected to be done by two nationally prominent civilian urologists—Dr. W. Dabney Jarman, 70 years old, of Washington, and Dr. Whitmore Jr., 59, of Miami Kettering Hospital in Miami.

A urologist not connected with Humphrey's case said that to remove the bladder usually takes five hours, but that it could be done in a patient whose bladder is scarred by radiation.

In such operations, the surgeon goes through the small bowel to a piece of intestine, then crimps the bowel together and later crimps an ileal loop—to be produced by the kidneys flow the skin of the abdomen.

A portion of the loop takes bowel functions as a urinal. The end of the tube is kept so that a plastic bag can be attached to collect urine. It must take care in the operation complications that can include damage to one or both kidneys.

Sometimes, depending on the size of the tumor, the ureter also remove the prostate gland.

Urologists say that there is a chance that a patient who has such extensive bladder surgery come impotent as a result.

Ford and Gromyko Talk of Arms Curb But Snag Continues

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—President Ford and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko held extensive talks today on the deadlocked negotiations on strategic arms limitation but apparently failed to bridge the remaining differences.

Mr. Gromyko, speaking to reporters outside the White House after the two-hour session, said "important questions" remained between the United States and the Soviet Union on resolving the stalemate.

"Both sides expressed their determination to continue an exchange of views on this major problem," Mr. Gromyko said, speaking through an interpreter. "We shall see how they develop."

The principal obstacle to conclusion of the arms-limitation talks is the inability of the two sides to agree on whether to include a new Soviet bomber known in NATO circles as the Backfire in the agreed ceilings for a new treaty as well as the new American cruise missile.

Mr. Gromyko said that he and the President also spoke about issues between the two countries as well as the Middle East where there had been agreement that both sides would "do all we could to be helpful in the interests of all peoples" in the area.

The failure to make progress in the discussion on strategic arms was not unexpected. There has been no progress in this area for most of the year. In fact, the meetings of Mr. Gromyko with Mr. Ford today and with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on Wednesday night in New York were the first high-level Soviet-American meetings since Mr. Kissinger visited Moscow in January.

In January, Mr. Kissinger believed that movement was possible on the strategic arms talks, but the United States then decided for both political and technical reasons to take a conservative attitude toward the negotiations.

The American proposal, submitted to the Russians in February, suggested that the controversial Backfire and the cruise missile issues be deferred and that the two sides sign a treaty on the questions that they had already agreed upon.

The Russians in March replied by rejecting this approach, insisting that there be some curbs on the cruise missile and that a ceiling of 2,400 missiles and heavy bombers on each side's arsenal. Of that number, 1,320 missiles could have warheads with multiple independently targeted missiles.

At the Burgundy Vineyards, a Sense of Suppressed Excitement

By FLORA LEWIS

BEAUNE, France, Sept. 26—The vats are filled and fermenting now in the Burgundy wineries, and a quiet head of excitement is building up as the vintners prepare to drain the juice of the 1970 harvest into barrels for the second fermentation.

The Little Furniture Show That Grew and Grew

house" when a select group of showrooms would stay open one Saturday a year, the annual event has blossomed into one of the country's major commercial interior design shows.

designed by Bjorn Wiblad, a Danish designer known for his fanciful ceramics. His new cocktail tables and dining-height tables are screened designs. They are signed by the producer in limited editions by Rosenfeld Germany.

New designs making debuts at Designer's Saturday include, top, Unisoft seating line from CI Designs; above, a new Ward Bennett arm chair for Brickell Associates and, below it, a three-legged sauna stool from Stendig. The snake-like Varius seating is by Metropolitan Furniture, the Sintesi wall lamps are from Castelli Furniture. At far right are Bjorn Wiblad's silk-screened designs from Turner Ltd.

The out-of-town visitors are the first of a steady stream of architects, designers, students, and even the general public, who have come to town today for Designer's Saturday. They are expected to total 4,000 and they are here to see the new products, try them out in person and swap trade gossip.

Although it started as a regional show, this year visitors will come from as far as Canada, South America and Britain, according to Judson Spencer, the show's organizer.

The news from American manufacturers is primarily on the office furniture field. The item is "ergonomic" seating, which in layman's terms means a posture-conforming chair. There is a raft of new ones from several manufacturers.

Clean-lined and contemporary design is the main theme of this market. And trends in modern design originate here and become hallmarks of things come in the residential market.

A Popular Belief About Sex Is Disputed by Survey of 3,000 Women

By JANE E. BRODY

A survey of women throughout the country has suggested that, counter to popular belief, a large percentage of women do not reach orgasm during intercourse without direct stimulation of the clitoris.

report Miss Hite had taken "a giant step forward in letting men and other women in on the fact that there are many different ways to enjoy sexuality throughout the life span."

The clitoris is a pea-sized hooded organ above the vagina that sociologists regard as the female sex organ equivalent to the penis of the male. The clitoris becomes erect during sexual excitement.

Although 82 percent of the women surveyed said they were able to reach orgasm through masturbation and 95 percent of those were able to reach orgasm through direct stimulation of the clitoris, many indicated that they were reluctant to ask their partners to stimulate them manually and few were willing to stimulate themselves in the presence of their partner.

speaking freely about their sexuality and those who had never before said or thought much about it.

Dr. Leah C. Schaefer, after the report of the Society for the Study of Sex, noted that she was surprised to find that many women are not aware of the fact that they can enjoy orgasms through clitoral stimulation.

Marlboro Casts Forego In Another 'Heavy' Role

More rain keeps the track muddy, Forego and Tommy Trotter will renew their battle of the stakes today in the $283,700 Marlboro Cup at Belmont Park. Forego, as most horseplayers know by now, is the 6-year-old gelding that has been Horse of the Year the last two seasons and looks like a sure bet to make it again.

Trotter, of course, is a man, and not a horse. As racing secretary for the New York Racing Association, Trotter decides how much weight each horse carries in handicap events at Belmont, Aqueduct and Saratoga.

For the fourth running of the 1 1/4 mile Marlboro, he assigned Forego 137 pounds. That's more weight than the Lazy F Ranch champion has ever been asked to carry, and it's 18 pounds more than the most assigned to Honest Pleasure, the capable 3-year-old who will be running with second-highweight of 119.

"You can't really equalize things by taking more weight off the lightweights," Trotter said yesterday. "You hate to see a horse like this get beat, but it still comes down to what he did in his last race. I had to put two more pounds on him. He didn't leave me any choice."

Though Belmont is becoming Marlboro Country again, at least for a day, the commercially sponsored race that millions of Americans will see on national television will be called simply the $250,000 (bleep) Cup. That's the amount of cash the Marlboro people have thrown into the purse, with various entry fees accounting for the rest.

But because of television's ban on cigarette advertising, the name of the product being promoted has been deleted from the billing and the broadcast. The race is being televised as a special half-hour segment on CBS's "Sports Spectacular," from 5 to 5:30 P.M., New York time.

Last time out, carrying 135 pounds in the 1 1/4-mile Woodward Handicap two weeks ago, Forego's best position in the stretch and won going away. Second Spell (under 115 pounds) was second, 1/4 length back, and Honest Pleasure (carrying 121) finished third, 2 1/4 lengths behind Dance Spell.

Adjusting the scales of justice (or injustice, if you will), Trotter subtracted two pounds from Honest Pleasure for today's race and one from Dance Spell, while adding two to Forego. Theoretically, every horse in a handicap race should be carrying the amount of weight that gives each one an equal chance of winning.

Wheo Trotter put 134 pounds on Forego, 125 on Foolish Pleasure, a 4-year-old, and 116 on Lord Rebeau for the Suburban Handicap last July, some of the second-guessers accused him of overloading Forego. But the result a virtual heat for first among those three, vindicated Trotter's evaluation. Foolish Pleasure woo by a nose from Forego, with Lord Rebeau only a nose farther back.

Frank Whiteley, trainer of Forego, has accepted the 137-pound penalty for the Marlboro, and has named Willie Shoemaker to ride the favorite as he did for the first time in the Woodward. But yesterday's rainy weather, which turned the track sloppy and cut attendance to 11,165, raised some doubt about whether Forego would run in the second part of Belmont's three-race fall championship series.

Whiteley has until 45 minutes before post time to make up his mind. If the track is still muddy, he might keep Forego in the barn. The tall son of Ford has a reputation for not relishing mud. His long stride and the heavy weight might make him more tentative in slippery conditions, and that would put him at a disadvantage.

If no more rain falls, though, he'll probably go to the post in search of his 21st stakes victory and a first-place or second-place purse that would move him into third place on thoroughbred racing's list of career money-winner. His bankroll currently stands at $1,484,897.

"As long as the track isn't deep and biting," said Shoemaker, "he'll be all right."

Forego Listed at 6 to 5

LeRoy Jolley, trainer of Honest Pleasure, doubts that the weight will bother Forego, who was rated a 6-5 favorite in the overnight line.

"It won't make that much difference," said Jolley. "Champions carry high weights, and we know he's a champion."

Lois Rondinello, the trainer for Darby Dan Farm, won't have anything going in the Marlboro, but he sees conditioning rather than weight as the key factor.

"The extra two pounds shouldn't bother Forego," he said. "It's just a question of whether he's held his form. If he's as good tomorrow as he was two weeks ago, he'll win it."

Knicks Trade Denton, Bow to 76ers by 93-81

By PAUL L. MONTGOMERY Dover, Md., Oct. 1—The Knicks change of scene and opponent in continuing their exhibition but found the outcome as dispiriting as before. They lost to the Philadelphia 76ers, 93-81, at the Spectrum Center after having lost their season opener to the Nets last night.

some trims toward the required 12-man roster early next week. The 76ers, who had no trouble with the Knicks tonight, appear overburdened with talent, particularly at center and forward. "It's a shame you just can't keep all the players," said Gene Shue, the Philadelphia coach, of the 17 men he still has.

Royals Fail to Clinch, Lose in 9th to Twins, 4-3

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 1 (AP)—The three-game series between Kansas City and Minnesota to end the regular season opened tonight with the Royals needing one victory to clinch the American League's crown still undecided. The Royals won 4-3, in the ninth inning, and the Royals failed to clinch.

The Twins mounted a mild threat in the fifth after Bird had retired 13 straight batters. Ford doubled to deep left with two outs but Bird quelled the rally by getting Cubbage to ground out. Giants Planning First Lineup Change of the Season Not Due to Injury

By MICHAEL KATZ Asanville, N.Y., Oct. 1—Robinson has been told he's to start in place of Walker Gillette at the "X" wide receiver position in what would be the Giants' lineup change of the season not slated by injury.

Atlanta Falcons, Kansas City Chiefs and Pittsburgh Steelers in trials last year after a fine college career at Georgia Tech, has worked hard for his opportunities. He caught 10 passes for a team-leading 337 yards in the preseason, has backed up Gillette at the "X," or split end, and Ray Rhodes at the "wing," or flanker, position. He runs back punts and kickoffs and is usually the last man off the practice field—today, for example, he was out in the rain running patterns for Plumb while the rest of the squad was drying off after showers.

afraid of catching passes in traffic because "I don't mind getting hit." "In fact, I guess I'd rather be hit than hit someone else because I never particularly enjoyed knocking someone over," he said. That kind of masochism might seem appropriate on the Giants, who have lost their first three National Football League games. Yet, despite the disappointing start, Arnsparger has steadfastly refused to shake up his lineup.

Their beige paint is chipped and peeling and the stalls in Barn 10 at Belmont Park look the same, except for the one where Forego lives. Hanging loosely from the top of the door frame is an empty oats sack. "To keep him from hitting his head when he goes in and out," his trainer, Frank Whiteley, was saying. "He's a big horse." He's the biggest horse in racing. Part runner, part weight lifter, Forego is developing a cult of romance as Kelson did a decade ago. The 6-year-old gelding will be carrying 137 pounds, including 98 belonging to Bill Shoemaker, in today's $283,700 Marlboro Cup—that's 18 pounds more than Honest Pleasure, the 3-year-old winner of the Travers Stakes at Saratoga six weeks ago.

Frank Whiteley has also been good. He trained Ruffian and before that he trained Damascus and Tom Rolfe. "I've been lucky with this horse, even though I got a miserable groom," he was saying oom with his gruff smile, just loud enough for the groom in Forego's stall to hear. "The two of them are contrary, but they get along pretty good. Isn't that right, McGee," he called. "You and that horse get along." Frank Whiteley put the letters in the hip pocket of his old pants. "You got to be patient with all horses," he said. "I got this horse in February down in North Carolina, Camden, and I didn't have much hope. He had problems all his life with his legs. He only got one good leg. His left back one. He's got all those knots and bumps on the other three. Just from wear and tear." "You Worry About All of 'em" "Do you worry about him?" "You worry about all of 'em." Frank Whiteley said. "You got a horse one minute and the next minute you haven't. I found that out with Ruffian, that's for sure. You just have to keep trying, though."

Ohio State Choice Over Higher-Ranked U.C.L.A.

By GORDON S. WHITE JR. Those who pick the favorites in college football games and those who vote each week in the polls for the top 10 don't seem to agree these days.

For instance, if the University of California, Los Angeles, defeats Ohio State at Columbus, Ohio, today, should this be considered an upset? It will be an upset to the oddsmakers who pick the favorites, because the Buckeyes are favored. It may not be to those coaches and writers who voted in the wire-service polls this week, because U.C.L.A. was ranked a few notches higher than Ohio State.

U.C.L.A., undefeated in three games under its new coach, Terry Donahue, will face a team that wants victory with a vengeance. The mighty forces of Woody Hayes not only lost to Missouri last week in a shocker, 22-21, but also lost to U.C.L.A. in the Rose Bowl game last Jan. 1, 23-10.

and Pete Johnson (10 points scored a game), is fifth at 346.3 yards a game rushing. Ohio State is much less effective with the pass, however, than the Bruins have been.

Donahue said of his U.C.L.A. team, "We don't really know how good we are." He'll probably find out today. The television fan will doubtless see a lot of running in this game, to be shown by ABC Sports (over Channel 7 in New York) beginning at 1:30 P.M., Eastern daylight time.

The football fans, however, who want to see a lot of passing, it is suggested they take a trip up the Hudson to Michie Stadium, at West Point, N.Y. There the pleasantly surprising Army team, which has found the aerial route to be the best, goes against Stanford, which has been throwing the ball for years.

task. Tony Dorsett, going after the Heisman Trophy, was kicked in the left calf last week and sat out much of the victory over Temple. Duke has a strong defense that might be able to do what Georgia Tech did two weeks ago: contain the Pittsburgh back's outside running.

The front tires on the Pittsburgh team's chartered plane blew out yesterday as it landed at the Greensboro, N.C., airport. No one was injured.

Ricky Bell, the nation's top rusher, at 180.7 yards a game, will lead Southern California against Iowa.

Boston College is doing so well that the Eagles should win at Navy today. After all, the Middlems must feel as if they were knee-high last week when Michigan ran over them, 70-14.

Brown has shown it is going after the elusive Ivy League title, with a victory over Yale two weeks ago. John Anderson's Bruins can add a little emphasis to their drive with what should be a victory over Princeton at Old Nassau today.

Penn State can either begin making plays to stay home on New Year's Day or start winning. The Nittany Lions can start with Kentucky today.

No Peace For Old Pharaoh

By Russell Baker

ANNANDALE, Va.—Somewhere our nation lost a serious, sophisticated approach to diplomacy. This occurred, perhaps, about the time of the 1828 Presidential election, when the last of our great diplomats in the White House lost to a Tennessee frontiersman, horse racer, gambler and Indian fighter who derided diplomacy as mere gabble and glorified military action.

When John Quincy Adams vacated the Presidency to Andrew Jackson, our political leadership stopped thinking of diplomacy as a serious occupation and began considering it a calling that, an intelligent jack-of-all-trades could handle effectively.

Only occasionally, in such men of culture and skill as Commodore Perry, Anson Burlingame and Hamilton Fish in the 19th century, and Dwight Morrow, Robert Murphy, Charles E. Bohlen, Llewellyn Thompson and Ellsworth Bunker in the 20th, did we exhibit the diplomatic sophistication and dexterity we term "professional."

One rare push toward professionalization came from a scholarly Harvard graduate, Robert F. Kelley, who joined the old consular service in 1922 and soon became chief of the State Department's Division of Eastern European Affairs.

Anticipating inevitable United States diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union, he initiated a four-year educational program in Russian studies abroad for interested Foreign Service officers who were then given assignments to posts as close as possible to the Soviet Union. This program produced the George Kennans and the Bohlens.

But Franklin D. Roosevelt and New Deal associates took a dim view of this approach to what they considered a much-maligned Communist regime and ordered the division abolished, its sizable collection of materials dissolved, and Mr. Kelley shipped abroad. In a premonitory signal of the McCarthy era, Mr. Kelley became an untouchable. Unable to obtain another assignment, he resigned from the service. He died just a few months ago, a man too profound and cultured to have become embittered by this Jacksonian approach.

By describing power simply in military and economic terms, perpetuating the myth that these are the only dimensions of national security, aspirants for the Presidency this year have made clear that our frontier approach to international politics continues; the diplomatic skill and the political and institutional resources it demands have not even been mentioned.

The budgetary aspect of national defense is treated simply as involving the issue of how much money should go to the military Establishment, without considering whether diplomacy is getting enough. Far from propounding one single thought about the nature of diplomacy and how we should improve our competence in it, President Ford has excoriated debate from our political vocabulary and fuzzed the whole diplomatic issue it presents.

The consequences of this superficial approach are legion. Over the years, our diplomatic Establishment has been compelled to navigate without a clear idea of its calling and what it demands. Having to meet only the requirements of a good liberal-arts education, a high IQ, and a good personality, Foreign Service officers are ignorant of diplomacy itself.

Nor has the State Department's so-called "training" agency, the Foreign Service Institute, corrected this deficiency. It provides incoming officers with a few weeks of a general smattering of "foreign affairs," including a window-shopping tour of some Federal agencies involved in them.

This is why the State Department has tacked this way and that in the past in recruiting and examining objectives and methods; why it has swung from separate diplomatic and consular services to a single service and back to a fragmentation into five branches — not just two — with no basic, synthesizing instruction to unify

An Alas for the Career of Diplomacy

By Smith Simpson

them; and why it so prevalently views the Foreign Service as simply an aggregation of assignments, "jobs," "slots," "tracks," "cones" and classes.

With professional criteria of performance and values failing to win a secure foothold, promotion has become the consuming obsession of Foreign Service officers. Becoming an ambassador — not professional service to one's country — is "what it's all about" — so much so that enough unsuitable officers are able to maneuver their way to ambassadorships as to discredit the argument that career people uniformly make better chiefs of mission than political appointees.

The confusion is such that almost as many foreign services exist in the minds of officers as there are officers themselves, each visualized in terms of each individual's experience and observation, our diplomatic Establishment becoming a kind of Rorschach inkblot interpreted in response to individual stimuli.

"Reform" has therefore succeeded "reform" without visible improvement, one canceling the results of an earlier one.

Collective bargaining and grievance parleying are conducted with slight reference to the basic needs of diplomacy itself. The American Foreign Service Association chortles in triumph over having wrung from "management" the concession that permits a diplomatic officer to turn down a hazardous assignment, such as the Moscow Embassy, without putting a black mark on his record. Is this professionalism? Or unionism?

Our diplomatic Establishment needs a sense of professional mission, and Presidential aspirants need to level with the public on the crucial role that diplomacy plays through its contribution to national security. We need to consider whether we put enough revenue into peacekeeping.

We might even consider whether we should emulate our first forty years, when five of six Presidents entered the White House with diplomatic experience abroad or service as Secretary of State, or both, and require some professionalism of them in foreign affairs.

Smith Simpson, author of "Anatomy of the State Department," is a retired Foreign Service officer. This was adapted from an article in the Foreign Affairs Journal.

Wherein it is asserted that a sense of professional mission is sorely needed

On Carter's Amnesty and Pardon Views

By James Reston Jr.

HILLSBOROUGH, N. C. — For a Southerner and a Democrat, Jimmy Carter has a curious position on pardon and amnesty. He says there's a difference, and he's right about that anyway.

Pardon in the Carter definition is morally neutral: "What you did, right or wrong, is forgiven," he told the American Legion. Let's forget for the moment that if someone does something right, he hardly needs to be forgiven.

And amnesty to Mr. Carter is moral surrender for the Government: "Amnesty means what you did was right," and implicitly, though Mr. Carter does not say it, what we, the Government, did in Vietnam was wrong.

If the Democratic candidate is right about this, a considerable rewriting of Civil War history would come in his administration. For during the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln declared three conditional amnesties for the Southern rebels, and after the war Andrew Johnson declared three more conditional amnesties before his Universal Amnesty of Dec. 24, 1868. In that final, blanket amnesty, Mr. Johnson restored all rights, privileges and immunities under the Constitution to all and to every person who directly or indirectly participated in the late insurrection or rebellion.

Ergo, the Southern insurrectionists and rebels must have been right! This is an historic discovery of considerable magnitude; and one which, no doubt, explains Mr. Carter's lead over Mr. Ford in the South. Who would have thought ten years ago that the South would rise again in quite this way? If there had been tapes in the Oval Office when Andrew Johnson, a Tennesseean, was deliberating his Universal Amnesty of 1868, he probably would have quipped that few would discover the true meaning of his amnesty declaration for over a hundred years.

And that brings us to pardon. There is a recent tradition for pardon. Take, for example, the human consideration that Richard M. Nixon showed to Angelo DeCarlo, the Mafia leader, by releasing him from jail early because he was ill. Mr. DeCarlo's consigliere (lieutenants) should be pleased at the rise in their old chief's stature at Mr. Carter's hands. But both Mr. Nixon and President Ford should be even happier at Mr. Carter's generous divestiture of his best issue: Mr. Ford's pardon of Mr. Nixon. Now we're told or reject, but perhaps since most of them are moving into their middle thirties, they are mature enough to consider the choice. In whose behalf does Mr. Carter make such an offer, and by what standing?

Amnesty, on the other hand, stemming from the Greek word amnesia, requires no acceptance and no admission of guilt, and no moral standing for its proclaimer, for it means simply that the law, right or wrong, will not apply. The "offense" as defined under the Selective Service law or the Uniform Code of Military Justice, is overlooked.

I suspect Mr. Carter really knows all this. Certainly, his ancestor Littleberry Walker Carter understood what amnesty meant when he returned to Sumter County, Ga., after the Civil War, technically guilty of treason. Andrew Johnson's amnesties meant reconciliation and a new beginning after a divisive conflict. It had nothing to do with whether Littleberry was right or wrong.

Pardon, however, does not start with 0, as in acid, abortion, and amnesty, the three n's that defeated George McGovern. But I can't understand why Mr. Carter would want the moral rectitude of the Confederacy to be a campaign issue in 1976.

Amnesty for Jimmy Carter!

Thus, it is no accident that Mr. Carter rather than proposing dramatic new programs is promising that he can introduce greater competence, responsiveness, and dependability into existing programs. He stresses government reorganization, zero-based budgeting, welfare reform. He is saying that government can be compassionate but also skeptical, that before billions are committed to new programs there are old ones that should be dropped.

At the same time as its competence has been called into question, liberalism has also lost touch with many of its traditional working-class and lower-middle-class adherents. This is due to cross-currents from the Vietnam War, the futile busing controversies, and the ill-defined argument over permissiveness toward crime and radicalism. On these issues, Mr. Carter is tacitly repositioning his party. His themes are patriotism, a strengthening of families and neighborhoods, the work ethic.

Giving a new direction to a political party is a hazardous enterprise. There are Democrats who ridicule Mr. Carter's concern with government reorganization and balanced budgets as the Certified Public Accountant's approach to politics. Many liberals are "turned off" by his stress on political themes that are ungenial to them. In reaching out to disaffected ex-Democrats and moderate independents, is he failing—these doubters ask—to reach and motivate the hard-core Democratic constituencies who must turn out in large numbers if he is to win?

Mr. Carter won his party's nomination by capturing the center and getting a share of the liberal vote. In following this same liberal-centrist strategy in the general election, he is in the unusual position of a candidate who could conceivably either win a landslide or lose the election. Regardless of the electoral outcome, however, the Carter campaign is sure to be an important chapter in liberalism's efforts to regain popular confidence.

The moral rectitude of the Confederacy—a campaign issue in this election?

POSTPONEMENT WON ON CRIME-FUND CUTS

New York City Is Expected to Suffer a Big Slush in U.S. Subsidy When State Allots Share

By JUDITH CUMMINGS

New York City won four weeks' time yesterday to try to alter a state plan that would substantially reduce the city's share of Federal anticrime money.

The State Crime Control Planning Board approved a $32.7 million spending plan for 1977 but reluctantly delayed action until Oct. 29 on allotting specific amounts for localities and programs.

The postponement followed warnings at the board meeting at 2 World Trade Center from Nicholas Scopetta, chairman of the City Criminal Justice Coordinating Council, that the city's criminal justice mechanism was "in danger of grinding to a halt" under pressure of its caseload.

Mr. Scopetta argued that, although the state as a whole was faced with reduced Federal subsidies, the city was being asked to take a disproportionate share of the cut that would among other effects, force the shrinkage of District Attorneys' staffs and eliminate some of the most successful anticrime programs.

The statewide plan approved by the board, for the 12-month fiscal year that began Oct. 1, represents a reduction from the $49 million it administered for the unusual 15-month fiscal year just ended. It is subject to approval by the Federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which funnels the money into the states.

Action by the Congress yesterday authorized $127 million more to be added to the $753 million already appropriated for L.E.A.A. for fiscal 1977. State spokesmen said they were hoping for a small addition to local financing from that increase.

Scheduled to Get $11.6 Million

Mr. Scopetta's agency last year had $18.6 million to spend over 15 months. It was scheduled to get $11.6 million under the plan for the 1976-77 fiscal year to distribute among the Police Department, the courts, the correction system, district attorneys, Legal Aid Society and private agencies.

"What it boils down to is every program is in danger of a 25 percent cut—and eliminating some as well," said Mr. Scopetta, who is also Commissioner of Investigation.

As an example, he said a special Major Offense Bureau in the Bronx, which claims a 94 percent conviction rate, would have to shut down Dec. 31 without added funds. The bureau which employs 11 persons, has a $400,000 annual budget.

Frank J. Rogers, chairman of the board and Commissioner of the State Division of Criminal Justice Services countered that such programs were eligible for alternative financing from Federal discretionary funds.

A 9-to-7 vote of the present members of the 28-member panel granted the delay on locality allotments on a motion from deputy Mayor Paul Gibson Jr.

Mr. Rogers, however, cautioned the city officials not to bank on getting "a more Solomon-like decision than we have here today."

"We can't say to the rest of the state that New York City is our only problem," he said, noting that Newburgh, not New York, had the highest overall crime rate and the highest rate of violent crime in the state.

Because of Federal requirements, money to the state for juvenile-justice programs will be the only area to increase in the 1977 budget, from $8.8 million last year up to $11 million.

FINDINGS BY VIKING ARE STILL A PUZZLE

Group at Pasadena Seeks Reason Why Lander Has Not Found Any Organic Compounds

By JOHN NOBLE WILFORD Special to The New York Times PASADENA, Calif., Oct. 1—The search for organic compounds on the surface of Mars has once again produced negative results, and this has the Viking project scientists more and more puzzled.

Even scientists who doubted that the unmanned spacecraft would find evidence of life in Mars had assumed that some organic material—molecules primarily of carbon and hydrogen—would be found.

Dr. Klaus Biemann of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, leader of the molecular analysis team, reported at a news conference today that a second organic chemistry test by the Viking 2 lander had failed to turn up any evidence of such substances in the Martian soil.

A grand jury yesterday proposed major changes in city and jail security facilities, including the Tombs and the installation of electronic devices in cells for monitoring of prisoners.

The weapons, along with the irritant chemical, Mace, and five Magic Marker devices filled with smokeless powder were discovered in the holding cell one floor away from the court where Herman Bell, Anthony Bottom and Albert Washington had just been sentenced for the murder of Police Officers Waverly Jones and Joseph Piagentini.

'An Average Fellow' Is Accuser of Lefkowitz Aides

By MARY BREASTED

Bernard Landers, the Syracuse accountant who served as a key witness in the Manhattan grand-jury investigation of alleged bribery of aides to Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz, described himself yesterday as "just an average fellow" who always "tried to do a good job."

Landers said, the Attorney General had "no comment at this time." Mr. Landers, a consulting auditor who got state assignments to audit multimillion-dollar state construction claims the Attorney General's office had to fight in court, is described in the indictments as paying numerous bribes to members of the Attorney General's staff.

Landers said he had run unsuccessfully for the Onondaga County Comptroller's job four times as the Democratic nominee and that he was no longer active in politics there. Earlier this year, he said, he was awarded an accounting consultant contract by the Syracuse Board of Estimate to serve as accountant for the Model Neighborhood Corporation, the corporation, which has been troubled by a scandal involving the disappearance of $18,000 in rental fees, later hired Mr. Landers to be its staff financial manager.

Marjorie Lutz looked up. She had just draped black crepe over a railroad milestone across the street from the feed mill that she and her husband, Richard, operate here. She put a bouquet of flowers in front of the stone and said, "I should be crying."

the fall, the arrival of the last freight train from the east was a sad occasion, especially for the Lutzes. It signaled the end of their business in Roxbury, where they are the biggest industry in town and the biggest single customer of the railroad. The Lutzes will be moving 41 miles to the north.

SANDS OF POLICE
TEST AT CITY HALL

West Brighton. About 1,500 off-duty policemen gathered outside City Hall yesterday evening, chanting slogans and waving banners they had done earlier in the day. In the afternoon, swarms of uniformed policemen stood guard, but did not enter the building. The demonstration was orderly, and the Police Department there were no arrests. But it was noisy because of the chants and whistles blown by the demonstrators. The chanting was directed at Mayor Beame and Commissioner Michael J. Codd, on the steps of City Hall.

But late yesterday a spokesman for the P.B.A. insisted in an interview that "Doug Weaving made it clear to the city that this package wouldn't sell." "But they created an environment in which he was not able to refuse them," the spokesman said. "In fact, there was one scene at the negotiations in which one city official stood up and told Doug: 'If you were a real leader, you would convince your delegates.'"

Some of the police officers picketing outside City Hall yesterday wore false noses and toy eyeglasses to conceal their identity and presumably to prevent reprisals from their superiors later on.

Beame's negotiating team, when the city's final offer was made in the predawn hours of Thursday—an offer that was accepted by Mr. Weaving and the other P.B.A. leaders—that there was "no way" that the P.B.A. delegates would agree to the pact. He also said that though he accepted the offer, he was really opposed to it.

However, Mr. Weaving's statement was challenged yesterday by both Deputy Mayor Zuccotti, who was the city's chief negotiator, and Sidney J. Frigand, Mayor Beame's press secretary. "What Mr. Weaving is saying is preposterous. It's ridiculous and it's absurd," Mr. Zuccotti said. "We shook hands in agreement, and even discussed what their strategy would be in obtaining approval from the delegates."

Mr. Frigand too said he recalled that Mr. Weaving and his colleagues had given their acceptance of the pact. "In fact, they were sure they could get approval," he said. "They wouldn't have called all the delegates in the absence of an agreement. There were too many witnesses."

Bail Granted in Shooting of Officer

By ROBERT D. McFADDEN

The message read: Carlos Ruiz, prime suspect in shooting of PO Smith was released today by Judge Parness, Bronx Supreme Court, in $5,000 bail. Defendant made bail.

Asked about the rare use of the teletype to convey non-police information, a spokesman for Francis J. McLoughlin, Deputy Commissioner for Public Information, said, "It's about as unusual as that decision was."

Weather Reports and Forecast

Figure beside Station Circle is temperature. A boundary between cold air and warmer air, under which the colder air pushes like wedge, usually south and east. Warm front: a boundary between warm air and a retreating wedge of colder air over which the warmer air is forced as it advances, usually north and east. Occluded front: a line along which warm air is lifted by opposing wedges of cold air, often causing precipitation. Shaded areas indicate precipitation. Dashed lines show forecast afternoon maximum temperatures. Isobars are lines (solid black) of equal barometric pressure (in inches), forming air-flow patterns. Winds are counter-clockwise toward the center of low-pressure systems, clockwise outward from high-pressure areas. Pressure systems usually move east.

On Duty and Off: One Voice

Watching Pickets in Rain at City Hall, an Officer Tells of Frustration

By JOSEPH B. TREASTER
The drizzling rain had slickened Police Officer Frank Knazik's rubber raincoat and put a glistening fringe on his bushy mustache as he stood watching the off-duty policemen and their wives demonstrating yesterday at City Hall.

He had been working demonstrations for all of his 14 years on the force, but this time there was none of the disgust and irritation he had so often felt in the past at people making a spectacle of themselves and telling higher-ups what they had better do. "Maybe at other demonstrations, the cops weren't aware of what people were demonstrating for," he said, "but here, we're quite aware, and I know on one marching had a malicious attitude toward me."

Several Protesters Joined by Wives and Children at Demonstrations

By JUDY KLEMESRUD
Police Officer Joseph Campagnola asked his children yesterday morning whether they wanted to go to school or join him and his wife on the picket line around City Hall. The three school-age children eagerly chose the picket line. Two-year-old Gina Marie came along too.

"At least they get to spend a day with their daddy this way," said dark-haired Kathleen Campagnola, who is 32 years old. She was echoing the complaints of many police wives that their children rarely got to see their fathers—and would see even less of them under the proposed new work schedules. The Campagnolas, of Valley Stream, L. I., were among several dozen police families that marched together in the demonstration in the rain. Gina Marie was a red stroller, and Annette, 11, Kathleen, 8, and Joseph, 6, marched beside their parents.

years, said that Mayor Beame had expressed "no dissatisfaction or impatience" with his performance this week. Severely criticized for the failure by the police to arrest allegedly disorderly off-duty officers, Commissioner Codd said that there would be a crackdown against any police officers who violated the "public respect" for the city Police Department.

Leaders of Other Municipal Unions Think P.B.A. Got All It Can Get

By LEE DEMBART

Leaders of public-employee unions in New York believe that the policemen's union will not be able to get a better contract from the city than the one it has already turned down. They say somebody in the union has to tell that to the rank and file.

"What they need is a leader who will stand up and tell them that they have no place to go," one major union leader said yesterday. "Somebody who will tell them they can be out on the street, they can go on strike and they won't get more. They can't get more. Even if the Mayor gave it to the cops, the Financial Control Board wouldn't let them have it."

All the unions aside from the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association have agreed to the wage deferral that the police officers are trying to break. It would be embarrassing and politically dangerous for any union leader to see the P.B.A. get more.

"All the city employees are entitled to the same rap," said Barry Feinstein, president of the City Employees Union, which represents several thousand blue-collar workers and Housing Authority employees.

"The deferral agreement must apply to the police," Mr. Feinstein said. "If the City of New York were to change its position now, then they would have to change it for everybody. We don't expect to have our people placed in a less enviable position than anybody else."

What Gotham Expected

Victor Gotbaum, executive director of the largest city union, District Council 37 of the State, County and Municipal Employees, which has been the most responsive to the realities of the city's fiscal crisis, said he had expected the police actions to rile up his members.

"I thought it would make my troops restless," Mr. Gotbaum said. "I thought it would be catching, and our people would want to demand more. But at the delegate council it didn't even come up."

Mr. Gotbaum said that the attitude of his members was not "Let's follow the cops" but "What's the matter with the cops?"

Michael J. Maya, president of the Uniformed Firefighters Association, said: "They can go no piece at this point. They will allow no leadership to lead them, either." But he added:

"There's justification for what they're doing. Look at what the city is asking them to give back in exchange for rehiring 400 cops. I realize that the city must feel that they've got the P.B.A. in a weakened position. But even a dog will fight when you've got him in a corner."

Like the other labor leaders who discussed the situation yesterday, Mr. Maya pointed to the leadership problem in the police union. "Whether there is capable leadership in the P.B.A. or not," he said, "it's not getting a chance to be heard. When Weaving went to the delegates, he had nothing to sell. They destroyed the guy before he could present it."

Douglas B. Weaving is president of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association.

But another leader, who asked not to be identified, blamed Mr. Weaving, who is trying to hold off opposition from four candidates who are seeking his job.

Leadership Called 'Insecure'

"The bad mistake Doug Weaving is making is in fighting his opponents on their grounds," this unionist said. "The smartest thing he could have done when he took the package, before they were to say, 'Listen, this is all we're going to get, there's no point in fighting it.' But instead he tried to cover himself and told them, 'I don't like it. What do you think?' Of course they turned it down. Their leadership is too insecure to tell them what's going on."

Mr. Maya was concerned that one of the items the city had proposed to take back was the payments to the annuity funds, which cost the city $261 a year for each police officer. The money is turned over to the union, which uses it to purchase annuity plans that supplement the regular retirement funds.

All the uniformed services currently get the annuity money, though the legality of the payments has been questioned by the State Comptroller, Arthur Levitt, and a taxpayers suit has been filed to have the whole system declared illegal.

The city's attitude on the annuity money is of major concern to the firemen and sanitation workers, who will start negotiating contracts if and when the policemen settle on one. If the city prevails over the issue of the annuity, it will undoubtedly ask the same thing of the other uniformed services.
